OVERVIEW

As healthcare professionals and leaders, we know that patient safety, enhanced patient experiences, workforce health, and cost-effectiveness are critical outcomes of care with an essential common root. They are all impacted by our ability to communicate effectively and respectfully within interprofessional teams! As important as effective communication skills are, it is challenging to develop, practice, and teach this skill set amid relentless, high-stakes, high-stress work. Fortunately, there are lots of simple experiential activities that can be used to build these skills. In this interactive workshop, we will explore four or more activities and will explain how to use them for your professional development and as a teaching strategy within teams.

Please come with your cameras on!
